Udate your system to all latest VERSIONS for a better STAY on your computer..Many known shipping containers are transported by a combination of rail and truck. These containers are loaded into a shipping container car, which is pulled into a receiving terminal building. Shipping container cars are unloaded at the building, and the containers are either placed on or pulled off of railcars that will transport the containers to their ultimate destinations. The present invention provides a new shipping container car or similar cargo-carrying means that can carry shipping containers into a receiving terminal building without having to be pulled into the building on a railcar. In addition, the invention can be easily moved by road or rail. The invention includes a container-carrying container car which carries a pair of laterally spaced container support legs so that the container car is balanced as the car rolls along a roadway or over a rail. The invention does not require the container car to be pulled into the receiving terminal building. The invention can carry a container by itself or with other containers. The invention may be pushed or pulled along a roadway or over a rail. The invention includes a support for the car. The support allows the container car to tilt in the direction of travel without tipping over. The invention has a container engaging means and a container retaining means. The container engaging means allows a container to be easily positioned on and removed from the container car. The container retaining means holds and retains the container on the container car. The
